

Marin Chapter California Grand Jurors' Association

March Newsletter

President's Corner

Another month is zipping by with productive activities in progress. Outreach placed ads in the IJ and other media and hosted a couple of webinars that attracted a few interested folks each. At my request, our good friend Dick Spotswood devoted an entire article in the IJ to the Grand Jury encouraging readers to apply. That was just a few days ago, so it is too early to gauge the results. Our work at the Sunday Farmer's Market has been interesting with respect to the people we've met and those that express interest in the jury. But it seems that once they leave the Market they think more about the strawberries and bag of oranges they bought than the Jury. We may give it another try requesting them to fill out an application on the spot!

As mentioned in last month's column, I met with the county's equity officer who identified several organizations that could identify potential candidates for the jury. At this writing it is a work in progress. Also, I joined a Zoom meeting of the Chapter presidents on the fifteenth. There were about 10 presidents plus a half dozen staff members from headquarters. It was a good introductory session with the decision to meet again next month. I was asked to present one agenda item, namely chapter sustainability, which you all will recognize since I request members get involved in every newsletter. While on this topic, let me mention that it is again time to consider a slate for next year's officers and committee chairs. Please consider your personal interests and volunteer for a position to satisfy them. As Dick Spotswood said in his article, the jury is the only watchdog entity in the county and our job is to support it in a number of ways. To do it we need people and ideas!

So, let's get into Spring with a commitment to recruit some friends & neighbors, You know the drill. The most effective recruiter is a past juror. Make it happen!
